

Meet your new design obsession.

Interior designer Sophie Ashby has added a new success to her design repertoire: a gorgeous collection of show-stopping furniture – and we're just a little bit obsessed.

The debut collection, entitled Piece By Piece, is part of The Invisible Collection, and marks the first ever British designer to be represented by the furniture emporium.

This is the Leopard Foot Dressing Table, £15,620 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

Launched in 2016 as an online showcase for rare and unique pieces by esteemed French and international interior designers, The Invisible Collection already features the work of more than 40 architects and designers worldwide. Now, for the first time a British designer – rising star Sophie Ashby – has been invited into the mix.

These are the Pebble Tables £15,425 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

Ashby's collection comprises 17 pieces including mohair dining benches (the Chubby Bench is priced from £2,810), an acrylic Yves Klein blue inspired console table (£16,965), and a raw-edged Block-Face vanity mirror (£1,780).

This is the Yves Console, £16,965 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

The pieces are crafted from a variety of materials ranging from acrylic to jesmonite, steel to marble, shearling to burr elm timber.

This is the XO Live Edge Desk, £8,850 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

A key feature of Studio Ashby's work is to blend opposing elements; the raw with the refined, natural with manmade, neutrals with colours, the minimal with the rich, the expected and the surprising.

It's these playful juxtapositions and layering that define this gorgeous furniture collection.

This is the Sahara Sand Console Table, £10,755 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

Take the Stumpy Coffee table, for example, that pairs rustic log, bark still intact, with a clean, clear glass top.

This is the Stumpy coffee table, POA, by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

Studio Ashby's Piece by Piece collection draws inspiration from art, nature and the places Sophie travels to. From the works of Yves Klein to Jean Arp, the Japanese Kyoto gardens of Holland Park to the colours of the Karoo, the lines of Modernist simplicity to the shape of a Leopard's foot, inspiration for this collection has come from all over.

This is the Burlington Arcade table , £9,840, and Criss Cross dining bench, £6,470, by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

The Invisible Collection is the first website to access a previously private inventory of furniture creations by revered international designers. This means once one-off pieces initially created for specific spaces can now be snapped up by the rest of us – with just a click of a button.

This is the Matchy Matchy Bed, £20,760 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

This is the Chubby bench, £2,810 by Studio Ashby for The Invisible Collection

Each piece is made to order, making each one unique. Of course, with prices like £15,620 for the Leopard Foot Dressing Table and £20,760 for a bed, that's some pretty dangerous online shopping territory.