

Take a Walk on the Wild Side with These 10 Chic Animal Patterns

Leopard spots, zebra stripes, and more add an exotic flair to furniture, wallpaper, home accents, and upholstery

BY JILL SIERACKI

SEPTEMBER 11, 2020

The upcoming fall fashion week will introduce the cuts and colors everyone will be wearing in 2021, but one style that seems to be perennially in vogue is animal prints. From exotic leopard spots to textural snakeskin, these patterns inspired by wildlife readily find their way onto clothing and accessories. However, the trend isn't limited to the runway; textiles and tableware have all embraced the look, too. Whether you choose to go big and bold or pepper in small pieces, these exciting new introductions make for an eye-catching statement.

Eileen Gray's Transat chair, available from The Invisible Collection.
PHOTO: COURTESY OF THE INVISIBLE COLLECTION

6. The Invisible Collection

This sculptural seat looks like it could have been dreamed up in 2020, but it's actually an early 20th-century design by revered Irish architect and furniture designer Eileen Gray. Recognized as one of the icons of Art Deco, Gray originally conceived the Transat chair in the late 1920s. Ercart has re-edited the piece, which is hand-made in France and available in black-and-white cowhide.